

infinite worlds was first suggested by the pre socratic greek philosopher anaximander in the sixth century bce the evidence is not clear whether the worlds as anaximander viewed them were co existent or successive but he believed they were all perishable and in a cycle of creation and destruction other early recorded examples of the